

ABSTRACT

There are presented a method, device and system for allocating spill cells for an instrumentation fragment that is run on a processor that uses a register stack architecture where only one free register is available for such fragment.